The Burroughs Wellcome Fund seeks to support K-12 teachers in their efforts to promote excitement for science and mathematics by providing grants for materials, equipment, and supplies related to the implementation of high quality curriculum or activities in the classroom. The PRISM (PRomoting Innovation in Science and Mathematics) Award program provides grants up to $3,000 to cover the cost of equipment, materials, and supplies related to a hands-on science and mathematics curriculum in the classroom. Recognizing the need for materials training, additional funding up to $1,500 may be requested for professional development related to the implementation of new equipment in the classroom. Grants will be awarded to the school, on behalf of the applying teaching professional. All awards must have the full support of the principal who must accept the award giving permission for the materials, supplies or equipment to be used in the classroom. It is recommended that the teaching professional and principal review the terms of the award on the BWF website (www.bwfund.org). The teaching professional and the principal should sign this signature page, indicating their support for the grant application.
